THE KISS YOU NEVER GOT

(Contributed.)

You may sing about the sweetness of the honey from the bees, Of the perfume of the flowers and the grandeur of the trees, But the sweetest thing on earth, my boy, all else is tommy rot, Is the sweetness, oh, the sweetness of the kiss you never got.

Oh the sweetness of the kisses that are wasted on the air, Seeming like an angel's presence, ever far, yet ever near. So if one comes your way, my boy, just nail it on the spot, Or the sweetest kiss will surely be the kiss you never got.

I don't want your pearls or rubies; you may keep your golden tips, But to get a taste of heaven, kiss a girl with ruby lips, And if you get the chance, my boy, just take one and you'll not Be sighing and repining for the kiss you never got.

If you see an invitation in the sparkle of her eye Let there be no hesitation nor acceptance by and by. Or you always will regret it and your happy future blot With a longing for the sweetness of the kiss you never got.

ANTI-SLAVERY AGITATION

In Italy Received the Sanction of the Pope

Rome, Jan. 12.—The continued existence of slavery in Africa, throughout all parts of the vast continent with the exception of Egypt, Tunis and Algiers, was the declaration made by Monsignor Coccio in an address before the second Italian anti-slavery congress, which recently met in Rome. The speaker described in vivid terms the character and nature of this terrific trading in human flesh all over the dark continent, from the north to the center—which is a real mine of slaves—and thence to the south, and after describing the sorrows and sufferings of these unhappy people, he quoted, amid enthusiastic applause, the words of Cardinal Lavigerie, that the whole world should work toward the abolition of slavery.

On the following day the pope gave private audiences to the members of the anti-slavery congress. Every one was presented individually to his holiness, who praised their labors in the noble work of striving to abolish slavery.
